

Pam Fulmer: In a story passed down to me, our family had a cabin on the battlefield and were right in the middle of the fighting. Turns out that my Poes lived over 30 miles away near a small town in Georgia called Lafayette. There is another story that the wife of my Great Grandmother's brother had to refuge with other civilians behind Snodgrass Hill during the battle. There was a Poe Cabin on the battlefield but it did not belong to our line, and I haven't found a connection.
